

Efforts continue for fairer funding; “Day of Action” not forgotten

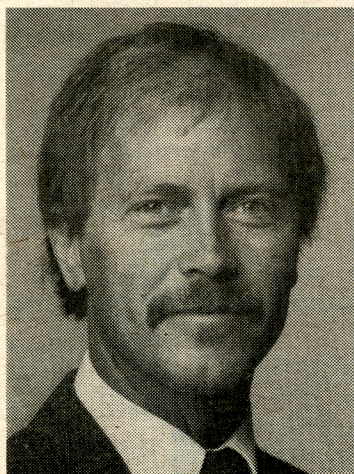

by Ken Whittingham

Concordia has hired a full-time staffer to advise Vice-Rector Maurice Cohen and the senior administration on all matters relating to government funding.

As part of his responsibilities Normand Proulx will keep in regular touch with Concordia's sister universities, government advisory bodies and the civil servants in Québec City working on a new funding formula for all Québec universities.

The decision to create Proulx's position was made during last fall's campaign to obtain equitable funding for Concordia from the government.

Cohen told TTR recently that Proulx's appointment

would help to ensure that Concordia is better-informed, better-represented, and better-placed to make representations to the government and government advisory bodies such as the Conseil des Universités and La conférence des recteurs et des principaux des universités du Québec (CREPUQ) — the umbrella group that represents all Québec universities.

The new position is part of a larger plan developed last spring to intensify efforts — both at the political and civil servant levels — to help ensure that Concordia receives its equitable share of funds when the new university funding formula is introduced.

Loyola donation

Proulx, 36, joined Concordia in July after 10 years at CREPUQ.

Educated at the Université de Montréal, he also taught briefly at UQAM and has done consulting work for Statistics Canada and other government and paragonmental bodies. He has published or edited numerous studies on issues relating to economics, politics, language and labour relations.

Larry Jeffrey

In a related matter, Larry Jeffrey and Albino Couto, President and Vice-President, respectively, of the 54-member union representing Loyola Campus Maintenance Workers, recently donated $500 raised by the union to help defray the cost of sending one busload of Concordia faculty, students and staff to demonstrate for fairer funding outside the National Assembly last November.

Jeffrey, Couto, and their colleagues also put in many hours of work helping to plan the Day of Action activities — both in Montréal and Québec City.

The donation was made in response to an appeal in mid-summer from Rector Patrick Kenniff and the senior administration that all members of the Concordia family help the University pay the $9,000 still outstanding for expenses related to the six-week protest campaign.

The results of that appeal will be published when all donations are received.

John C. Polanyi: “If we neglect our universities, we are neglecting thought”

Thanks to a generous grant from Consolidated-Bathurst, Canada's most recent Nobel Prize winner, John C. Polanyi, will be at Concordia for three days next week, beginning on Wednesday (the 28th) at which time he will give his keynote lecture.

Entitled “The Responsibility of Scientists in an Age of Science,” it will take place in Auditorium H-110 of the Henry F. Hall Bldg., 1455 de Maisonneuve Blvd. W., at 6:30 p.m.

Nobel laureate John Polanyi to give 1988 Consolidated-Bathurst Lecture

World-renowned scientist and anti-nuclear activist will speak on the 'Responsibility of Scientists in an Age of Science'

by Diane McPeak

His daughter Margaret has to make an appointment days in advance to see him. Indeed, Nobel Prize-winning chemist John C. Polanyi has to structure his time around a myriad of obligations: his academic and research responsibilities at the University of Toronto; his quest for equity in funding for Canadian researchers; his passionate stand on arms control.

This year's lecture, entitled The Responsibility of Scientists in an Age of Science, is free and open to the public, and continues the distinguished Consolidated-Bathurst lecture series, begun last year with the visit of New York Times columnist James Reston. It will take place on Wednesday, September 28, at 6:30 p.m. in Auditorium H-110 of Concordia's Henry F. Hall Building at 1455 de Maisonneuve Boulevard West.

The theme reflects Professor Polanyi's belief that scientists should involve themselves more actively in public affairs, and the consequences, impact and repercussions which scientific discoveries have on society.

Polanyi is one of Canada's leading physical chemists and a world-renowned authority on reaction dynamics, a new field of chemical physics. His studies of the way molecules combine to form new compounds helped to revolutionize the field of reaction dynamics and led to the discovery of the chemical laser, which has diverse applications in medicine and industry. It is this research, begun at the National Research Council (NRC) in 1952, which led to his 1986 Nobel Prize.

Professor Polanyi describes his research as "unlocking the molecular secrets that underly chemical reactions." He has said reactions occur when molecules collide and he had to find out how and why.

Ironically, the same day that John Polanyi won the Nobel Prize in Chemistry for his work on molecules and atoms, the NRC announced a chopping of $20-million and 200 jobs from its budget.

"It is particularly ironic," said James Bolton, president of the Canadian Society for Chemistry, "that the director of the Chemistry division at NRC has been forced to eliminate the very research section which Polanyi joined when he came to Canada in 1952."

Dr. Polanyi's pioneering contribution to science has been matched by his deep concern for major public issues; for more than 30 years he has been an outspoken anti-nuclear activist and a forceful critic of the state of university funding in Canada.

The day after the announcement of his Nobel Prize, Polanyi was busy not only responding to tributes but participating in a rally of Toronto students and teachers protesting the inadequate funding of their universities by the Ontario government. "If we neglect our universities, we are neglecting thought," said Polanyi.

His anti-nuclear activities have been part of his life since he was a young assistant professor. "(About the first petition I circulated at the U. of T.) I felt like a commercial salesman trying to sell an odious product. It was a time when scientists were expected to stay in their labs and mind their own business," he told Toronto Globe and Mail reporter Judy Steed.

"He stuck his neck out on arms control when his peers were doing nothing — when there was no one of his eminence who would speak up," said Eric Fawcett, a University of Toronto physics professor and founder of the group Science for Peace.

The good professor has termed the Reagan administration's "Star Wars" strategic defence initiative "a space extravaganza" by forcing the superpowers into the development of so-called third-generation nuclear weapons. Among the scientists that Polanyi has crossed swords with in his quest for a nuclear wind-down is Edward Teller, the "father" of the H-bomb.

Another antagonist, military writer John Gellner, said: "John Polanyi is a wonderful man, but he's an idealist. The only thing that prevents war is deterrents; you have to say to the other side: 'If you start anything, you've had it.'"

"Questions about the relative strength of the Americans versus the Russians are meaningless. They both have the power to destroy the human race," counters the Nobel laureate.

In recognition of his work as a leading scientist of his generation, Dr. Polanyi has received numerous awards over the years in addition to authoring more than 170 papers in scientific journals, articles articulating his strongly-held views on science policy, and he has co-edited a book, The Dangers of Nuclear War (1979). Among his awards — aside from his Nobel Prize — are the Steacie Prize for the Natural Sciences and the Killam Memorial Prize for distinguished lifetime scientific achievement. He is also a Companion of the Order of Canada, the country's highest civilian honour.

Name prominent here

The Polanyi name is well-known to the University since the Nobel laureate's uncle, political economist Karl Polanyi, is the guiding spirit behind an institute located at Concordia's School of Community and Public Affairs, the Karl Polanyi Institute of Political Economy.

During his three-day visit to the University, John Polanyi will also conduct seminars with Concordia faculty and students. On Thursday, September 29, there will be an open-forum "Conversation" beginning at 3:30 p.m., covering such topics as science, creativity and science policy, and survival in an age of nuclear weapons. It will take place at the downtown campus' Sir George Williams Faculty Club on the 7th floor of the Henry F. Hall Building.

At 9:00 a.m. on Friday, September 30, Dr. Polanyi will hold a research seminar in the Hall Building, Room H-435, for Chemistry Department graduate students and faculty from Concordia and other Montréal universities.

TESL prof. seeks best method of second-language learning

Palmer Acheson says there is almost no research in the field

by Zonia Keywan

Which is the better way to learn a foreign language — quickly, through an intensive, immersion-style program, or more gradually over a protracted period of time? In spite of the great interest in second-language learning in Canada and Québec, nobody really knows the answer to that question, Leslie Laszlo (PhD — Columbia) has been promoted to Full Professor. He joined the Department of Political Science in 1965, and was promoted to Associate Professor in 1975.

Dr. Laszlo's areas of research include Soviet and East European politics, international and regional institutions, comparative governments, international politics, and Catholic social and political thought and movements.

His essay "From Co-operation to Resistance: The Catholic Church in Hungary 1919-1945" was published in the book Catholics, the State, and the European Radical Right, 1919-1945 (1987), and is viewed as a key element in the book.

Dr. Laszlo's current research interests focus on the Christian Democratic Movements in Europe and Latin America.

He is known as one of the best teachers in the Political Science department, has tutored many outstanding students in the Honours program, and acted as supervisor on several Master's theses.

Dr. Laszlo is currently co-ordinator of the Russian Studies program.

says Professor Palmer Acheson of the Centre for Teaching English as a Second Language (TESL).

Acheson has recently begun work on a study which, he says, will be one of the first systematic investigations of the significance of the time factor in foreign language acquisition. He believes that the question has not been studied much before "because language teaching generally is in the grip of people trained in literature. There is a very weak tradition of scientific research among language teachers."

Even the French immersion programs in schools are difficult to study scientifically, he says. It could be that they are successful mainly because the students who take them "are usually the academic elite and the immersion teachers are also the elite."

Acheson's study, which is currently at the pilot stage, consists of teaching introductory German to adult volunteers using a pre-packaged 20-hour course prepared by BBC Television. The students have been divided into two groups: an "intensive" group, which has gone through the 20 lessons of the course in a single week, working for four hours per day, and an "extensive" group, which is now covering the same 20 lessons in 10 weeks, at the rate of two hours per week.

Apart from the time in which the course is covered, everything else is identical for both groups: the total hours of course time, the teacher — in this case, video and audio tapes, and the teaching methods and materials. Students in both groups are tested before beginning the course and at the end of the 20 lessons; they will be tested again one month and three months after completing the course.

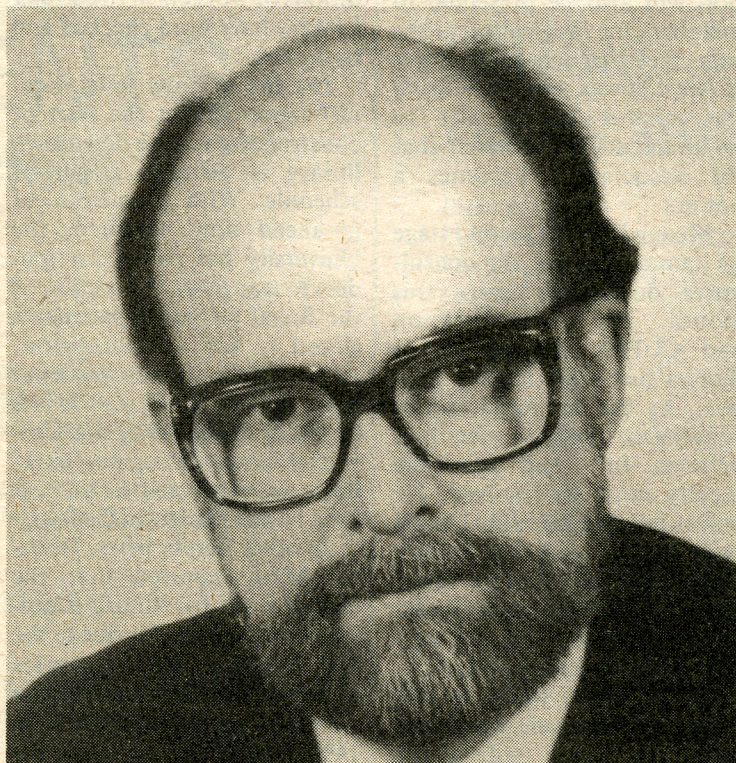

Acheson hopes that the final test results will show a significant difference between the two groups. But he cannot say at this stage which approach to language learning — if either — will prove more effective.

Other studies 'trivial'

Whatever the results of his study, Acheson believes the findings will be significant. "And if there is a clear difference between the two groups, schools should be very interested," he says.

After he completes his pilot study next spring, Acheson intends to repeat the whole experiment. And his investigation of language learning will not stop there. He plans to do more tests, using other languages and comparing different methods of teaching, such as radio vs. television courses.

"I hope this is not just a single study, but the beginning of a whole research program," he says.

CUPFA, Administration prepare consultation document for Association membership

by Barbara Verity

The Concordia University Part-time Faculty Association (CUPFA) has produced a consultative document on the hiring procedures, duties and responsibilities of part-time faculty at Concordia. If agreed upon, the recommendations contained in the document will become University policy as of June 1, 1989.

Talks between the two parties — CUPFA and the Administration — began two years ago, with the consultative document being completed in May 1988. Taking part in the talks were Hal Proppe, Associate Vice-Rector Institutional Relations and Finance; Susan O'Reilly, Director of Human Resources; Irene Devine, Associate Dean of the Faculty of Commerce and Administration; Karl J. Raudsepp, President of CUPFA; Janice Flood Turner, CUPFA Vice-President Internal; Chris McAll, CUPFA Vice-President External; and Jean-François Lavigne, CUPFA Treasurer.

Minor modifications were made to the document during the summer, after consultation with the University's deans. The draft agreement now goes before departmental chairs as well as the CUPFA membership for their response.

Karl Raudsepp said in an interview with TTR, "I think the CUPFA membership will be quite happy in that it lays down certain rules. We're moving in the right direction, at least. I think it's a major improvement over what has happened so far."

Associate Vice-Rector Hal Proppe is also enthusiastic about the document, saying that a lot of headway was made during the talks in respect to understanding the concerns of both sides. He underlined the difficulty of setting out a University-wide policy when practices concerning part-time faculty vary greatly between departments and faculties. Since the scope of the document is fairly general, each department will work out the details of how the policy will be implemented, he added.

Describing the document's most significant points, Raudsepp says that each department is to have a committee that will make recommendations about hiring. The criteria for hiring part-time faculty have also been set out, consisting of academic/professional qualifications, seniority, teaching quality, experience and preferences.

Also, part-time faculty will be advised in writing by July 1 and November 1 about which courses will be offered for the fall and winter terms, respectively.

Recourse mechanism

A recourse mechanism has also been agreed upon to deal with grievances among existing employees. A three-member committee will handle problems, consisting of a representative of the Administration, one from CUPFA and a third person agreed upon by both sides.

Although Raudsepp is happy with the content of the agreement, he says only the accreditation of CUPFA as a union will give the agreement the legal punch needed to protect part-time faculty.

"The document doesn't resolve grievances. It sets in place guidelines, but these are guidelines made as part of an honorable agreement made between people of goodwill," he says. He adds that with the exception of McGill, Concordia is the only Québec university where part-time faculty are not unionized.

The document and the possibility of unionization will be discussed at CUPFA's annual general meeting, to be held on Friday, September 30 at 12:00 noon in Rm. H-762, Henry F. Hall Bldg.

The organization's constitution will also be presented to members for ratification at the same meeting. Sent to members in April, it was rewritten during the summer to conform to requirements in the event that the association becomes a union.

Meanwhile, the second stage of hammering out the consultative document begins this month. The Administration and CUPFA will go on to discuss part-time faculty salaries. As far as Raudsepp is concerned, salary inequities between full- and part-time faculty must be resolved. He points out that there are almost twice as many part-time faculty as full-time, and that part-time faculty do 50% of undergraduate teaching but receive only 10% of the teaching budget.

CUPFA also wants to talk about benefits, pensions, compensation for individuals involved in Association activities, and other areas of remuneration.

Library issues were a major focus of Senate at its opening meeting last Friday.

Rector Patrick Kenniff explained that construction delays at the Vanier Library have been caused by the necessity of repouring cement after sub-quality cement had initially been supplied and poured. Other causes have included the late delivery of some materials as well as the shortage of labour in Montréal due to the high amount of construction in the city. He predicted that renovations will be completed by next spring, adding that disruptions in the library will be kept to a minimum.

Time spent to retrieve books is being decreased. The initial estimate of one hour has been reduced to about 15 minutes, Director of Libraries Al Mate reported.

Kenniff reported further that the health and safety conditions of workers in the Vanier Library have been checked and improved.

On the brighter side, Kenniff reported that the start of construction for the downtown library is actually ahead of schedule. With a government go-ahead now obtained, the University has called for tenders to tear down the section of the Royal George Apartments slated for demolition. Although the process was set to begin in 1989, it will start in late October. Meanwhile, the University is negotiating new parking space to replace the lot now used beside the Royal George.

In other library news, Director Mate reported that the capital grant for library acquisitions will not go far due to the high inflation rate in the price of books, which has reached an incredible average of from 13 to 14%. Supplementary funds for purchasing books and periodicals will be requested of the University. Kenniff added that the Capital Campaign will be an ongoing activity and has the potential of providing the necessary funding. The Rector also said that the $25-million goal of the Campaign has been exceeded and an official celebration is likely for October.

In response to a question on the presence of PCBs on campus, the Rector said that the University has checked that government regulations are being met for storing the approximately 350 gallons at the downtown campus of liquids containing the toxic chemical. The University would like to get rid of them, but so far has nowhere else to put the PCBs and awaits government help in dealing with the problem.

Complaints were voiced about the poor condition of the Hall Bldg. escalators as well as leaks of chemical fumes to nearby offices from chemistry labs. A proposal is being put together on the need for renovating the Hall Bldg., Vice-Rector, Services, Charles Giguère responded. Complaints were also made about the lack of air circulating in the Guy Métro Bldg after hours.

A detailed report about the effects on the University of current federal government copyright legislation was presented to Senate. The body also received guidelines for measures to be taken when necessity requires that an academic department be put under trusteeship. The guidelines are being studied by a Senate working group, which will report at the next Senate meeting.

Elections were held to choose the Evaluation Committees for the position of Rector and Vice-Chancellor and for Dean of the Faculty of Fine Arts; members were also elected to the Senate Steering Committee. Appointments to several other Senate committees were also announced.

Advancement staffers appointed

Office welcomes McConnell Fellowship winner

Concordia's Advancement Office has two new faces this fall to help with University fund-raising efforts — Yves Savoie and Hélène Cossette.

Savoie is one of the first five winners of a fellowship established late last year by the J. W. McConnell Family Foundation and the Canadian Association of University Development Officers (CAUDO).

The fellowships are designed to encourage the recruitment and training of development officers to offset what CAUDO calls "the critical shortage" of trained development professionals to help raise private sector funds for Canadian universities.

The other four winners were Simon Fraser University, Carleton University, Université Laval and Saint Mary's University.

Cossette is a graduate in Administration from Concordia's School of Community and Public Affairs; she will be responsible for special events co-ordination during the coming year.

Savoie is special assistant to the Director of Development.

Both are one-year appointments.

Concordia institution 'Reggie' passes away

by Donna Varrica

A small obituary in the September 14 edition of The Gazette marked the recent passing of Reginald James Parry — Reggie, as he was known to friends and colleagues, and the man for whom they named the pub on the 7th floor of the Henry F. Hall Building. From 1964 to his retirement in 1980 at age 65, Reggie was, technically, a staff member of the Physical Plant, but his tenure as Events Co-ordinator kept him in the thick of student activity.

He will be remembered most of all for his sense of humour and for his spirit of co-operation. From co-workers and other staffers to administrators and students, everyone whose path he crossed has a story about something he once said or did.

KEEP FIT

such events, he could often be found on the dance floor with the students.

"The kids loved him. He often had a beer with them when he finished his shift," said Wennerstrand.

It was not all that surprising, but quite an exceptional thrill for Reggie when, in 1977, they named the 7th floor pub for him.

Kelly Mackenzie, Operations Manager of Reggie's Pub for the past four years, says that until earlier this year, Reggie frequently dropped in for a beer.

"His big beef was the prices. He was always concerned with students' rights and giving students a fair deal — and that included beer prices at Reggie's. I don't think the students here today realize the impact he had on the University."

Always full of life

Reggie was 73 when he died of cancer on September 10 at Lachine General Hospital. He kept his illness private, preferring for people to remember him as he was — always full of life. He is survived by four sisters and several nieces and nephews.

Reverend Matti Terho, Chaplain, Campus Ministry, knew Reggie well and has organized a memorial service for Thursday, September 22 at 11 a.m. in the area just outside Reggie's. He has enlisted the aid of both CUSA and Cusa-corp, which administers the pub.

STUDENTS NEEDED FOR CAMPUS AND APPEAL BOARDS!

These boards are part of a system set up by virtue of the Code of Conduct (Non-Academic) to hear formal complaints made by one member of the University against another. This code is published on page 86 of the 1988-89 Undergraduate Calendar.

We need 40 students, seven of whom must be resident-students, who would be willing to give a small portion of their time to hear non-academic complaints against students, such as vandalism, fighting, etc.

If you are interested in becoming a member, please pick up an application form at the office of the Code Administrator any day between 9:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m.
